Dry weather, disease and insects have taken a heavy toll of many fine lawns this summer.

Turf that has been killed must be replaced by reseeding. For most homeowners the control of turfgrass disease is impractical.

Insects are another story. Most insect injury results from grub injury. Now there are numerous kinds of grubs that can be harmful to lawns, but the most common are: Green June Beetle, Japanese Beetle and the Masked Chafer.

The larva of these insects feed on either the roots or organic material on the soil surface. Those insects surfacing pulverize the soil causing it to dry excessively.

The answer to insects is quite simple – "grub proof" the soil with an insecticide. This is highly effective and will control grubs for 6 to 10 years. Three insecticides are recommended chlordane, heptachlor or dieldrin.

Heptachlor will give the quickest results, but chlordane would be the safest material.

It's important to get the insecticide into the soil as quickly as possible. Therefore, a dust or granular formulation is preferred. Watering following the application is helpful.

Claiborne Inge asked about grub control earlier this month. The day following the application of Chlordane, Mrs. Inge counted 75 Green June Beetle grubs in a two square yard area.

This demonstrates the need that exists on many lawns.

Wednesday, October 21, at the Old Holland Warehouse in Danville the 1970 Experimental Flue Cured Tobacco varieties will be on display.

Flue growers will enjoy observing these tobaccos.

In early November (11-12) there will be a forage workshop for dairymen. A new feeding program has been developed that will up production and reduce feed cost.

Essentially the new system involves the use of high quality corn silage feed free choice and a high protein concentrate at a reduced level. The rate of concentrate feeding is based on the percent crude fiber in the corn silage.

We're looking forward to having a good representation at this meeting.

Corn harvest losses can run from 0.5 percent to 26.8% according to a study in Ohio. On the average 10% of the production is left in the field.

Corn growers can ill afford such extravagance. A machine in proper adjustment should not exceed 5% loss.

If we are average, then a 60 bushel crop at current prices of $1.50 is a $9.00 loss per acre.

At the Five County Fair in Farmville last month, our exhibit won on chemical and pesticide safety. Last week we put an exhibit in the window of Coleman's Feed and Seed Store. We hope that our exhibits and information will be of some service to the people in Appomattox County. Barrel Of Money For Squad

Down came the pennies, dimes and quarters as David W. (Monk) Carter and Alton Lucado got ready to count a barrel of money donated to the current Rescue Squad drive by Sue and Herman Watson. All year long the Watsons have been dropping change into a wooden barrel. When the call came for $12,500 for a new ambulance for the Squad they brought the barrel to the Squad and said, "You can have all the money in it" – total $11.65. Squad members are happy to have donations from everyone, If you have loose change (or bills) anywhere around, Rescue Squad treasurer Ray Noble at Travelers Inn will be glad to total it and add it to the fund. Or call any other Squad member for an "at your door" pick-up of donations. And watch the red ambulance climb the hill toward that $12,500 goal (see chart at Appomattox Hardware).
